

Bringing the Language Home: Language Revitalization in the Family

The most important locus of language revitalization is the home, the primary place where first language acquisition occurs. Professor Hinton will present accounts from around the world of families where the parents, often language learners themselves, have made the commitment to use their heritage language at home with their children. We will see what lessons can be learned from examining their methods of bringing the languages to their homes, their sacrifices, tribulations, and successes.
